..MERRICONEAG HOUSE..

SO. HARPSWELL, MAINE.

UNQUESTIONABLY the popular house of Casco Bay. Thoroughly modern; every room in the house has a clear view of the ocean. "It has a homelike look, both in exterior and interior," while furnishings and service are in strict accordance with the up-to-date hotel in every respect. Standing apart from the cottages and business section of the point. It is adjacent to the steamboat landing having also a private boat landing for the accommodation of parties from the house. Bathing houses at the foot of a sloping lawn within 100 feet of the piazzas.

In conjunction with the Merriconeag is conducted the Ocean View, a house which in furnishings, equipment, and location, stands second to none on the Bay. Thousands of dollars have been expended in the last few years and the house has the best of accommodations for 100 to 125 guests. Electric bell service, bath, etc. Large dining room. # HARPSWELL.

THIS TOWN was incorporated January 20, 1758. The town is bounded on the north by Brunswick, on the east by New Meadows River and on the south and west by Casco Bay. The acreage of the Neck is 4,570 acres, according to measurements made in 1731. It consists of a Peninsula called Harpswell or Merriconeag Neck, which extends southwest from Brunswick. The word in full would be Merrucooneag, from Merru (swift quick) and oongan (portage), meaning the quick carrying place. To enumerate the attractions offered the summer visitors here would be an endless task. Harpswell is recognized by all to be one of the favored spots of Casco Bay. Few places offer such fine roads for driving or bicycling, some twenty miles of unsurpassed scenery, which well repay seeing. The advantages offered for yachting, boating and deep sea fishing are equal to any on the Maine coast. Among the historical places of interest may be seen the old Church at Harpswell Center, which was erected about 1758, and is now used as the Town building. North Harpswell offers to view the residence of the late author and story writer, Rev. Elijah Kellogg. Here he resided the greater part of his life. Without doubt no writer of the past century was so dearly loved by the young people as this celebrated author and preacher. The Congregational Church, where he preached for

BAILEY'S ISLAND.

BAILEY'S ISLAND is recognized by the summer visitors of Casco Bay to be one of the finest spots along the Maine coast, situated as it is some twenty miles from Portland, a sail of two hours on the Harpswell Steamboat line. The Island is about two and a half miles in length, and very narrow, in some places not over one hundred feet, having an elevation of something over seventy-five feet. No more beautiful spot could be desired where one could wish to spend a vacation, free from the strife and confusion of the busy city.

Although far removed from the surroundings of the main land, the accommodations are such that one can readily reach any of the many islands of the Bay at almost any time, the Harpswell Steamboat line touching two points of the island five times a day. The Northern and Southern portions of the island are well covered with fine fir trees, which add greatly to the beauty of the surroundings.

The "Woodbine"

And COTTAGES

WOODBINE COTTAGE, BAILEY'S ISLAND.

NOT strictly a Cottage, but a well appointed House accommodating 60 guests. No better place on the coast for a pleasant summer sojourn in congenial company and beautiful surroundings. All out-door sports are indulged in by our guests, such as Bathing, Boating, and Deep Sea Fishing, Tennis, Golf, Base Ball, etc, while for evening entertainment the cottage parlors are always at the disposal of the guests for card and game parties and social use.

Unsurpassed Table and Pleasant, Comfortable Rooms.

Open June 1st to October 1st, 1902.

Rates $8.00 and $12.00 per week.

Table Board $6.00 per week.

and along the Southern side can be had no finer view of the broad Atlantic as far as the eye can see, and to watch the breakers here is a sight that will always linger in the memory of one who loves nature in all its glory. North end of the island is what is called Water Cove, which makes a fine harbor, and where one can see every day fishing vessels at their anchors. On the eastern side of the bank one may visit Giant Steps, a very curious freak of nature, these steps being some forty feet in length, and having the appearance of being built by man. They set back in a recess of perpendicular ledge, and are of iron stone, the ledge being of a soft nature. There is another curious rock formation near at hand, called Thunder Hole, which is a cave in the ledge, where the water rushing in and out makes a noise that sounds like distant thunder, hence the name Thunder Hole. No finer place can be imagined for those who wish an afternoon's rest, surrounded by beautiful trees and the rest-less sea.

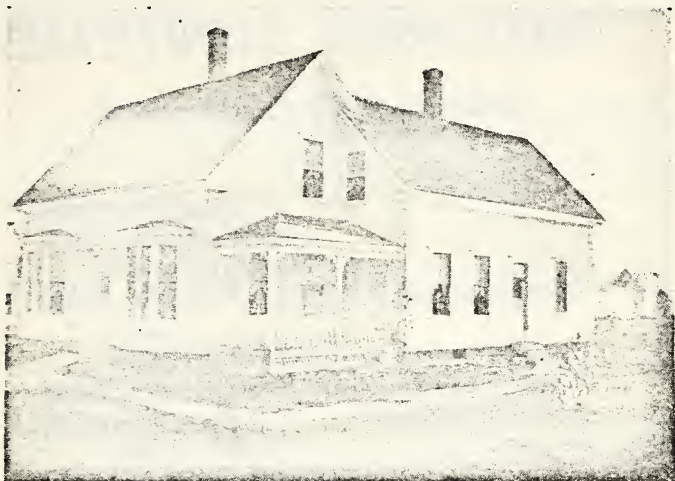

On the Western side is Mackerel Cove, one of the most beautiful harbors on the coast of Maine. This cove, fifteen hundred feet in length, the mouth being very narrow, has a depth of water sufficient to accommodate vessels of heavy tonnage. Here lovers of sea bathing will find all they would desire, and every day during the summer season the beach is spotted with bathers enjoying their delightful pastime.

Bailey Island has, without doubt, more fine summer cottages than any two islands on the coast, and are principally owned and occupied by New York and Boston parties. The hotel accommodations are equal to any on the bay, it being the pride of all to leave nothing undone for the comfort of the summer visitors. The roads are all that could be desired for bicycling and driving.

Golf Links are one of the many attractions.

The Island is part of the town of Harpswell.

Do you wish to know where to go this summer ?

Let us help you to choose. Go to the picturesque Bailey's Island, the popular island of the bay and engage room and board early at

ORR'S ISLAND.

THIRTY YEARS ago when the pioneer steamboats of the Harpswell Steamboat Company made their first trips down towards the eastern part of Casco Bay, landings at Orr's Island were made by means of dories, there being then no wharf where the present one stands, except possibly one or two so-called tide wharves, at which small vessels could make landings at high tide only. A few years later, when the first steamboat wharf was built, this island was the most eastern landing within the limits of the Bay. This distinction has since been given over to Cundy's Harbor and Small Point to the MacDonald Steamboat Line, Orr's Island being the terminus of the Harpswell boats.

Geographically the island is similar to the other large islands of the bay, being very irregular in coast line, deeply indented with gulfs and coves, with alternating sandy beaches and bold, rocky cliffs. The surface is also uneven, presenting a contrast of heavy pine and fir growth, with open fields and meadows, the forest growth in most places reaching to the extreme edge of the shore. A direct road is had to the mainland by means of the romantic Orr's Island Bridge. to Great Island, and from that island to the mainland by the picturesque Gurnet Bridge.

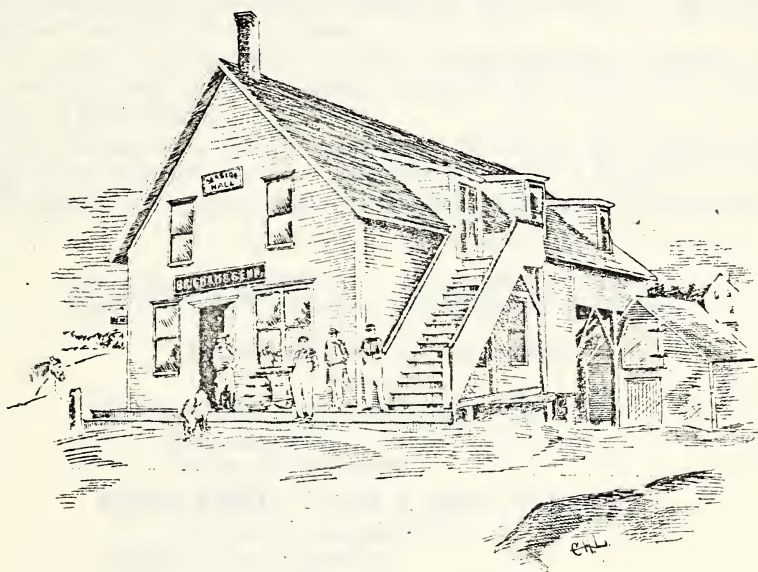

The road on Orr's Island runs for the most part on a high ridge from which glimpses of the sea can be seen at intervals. It has an extreme length of about five miles, and a varying width of from one-eighth mile to two miles. Ready communication is had with Portland and the outer world by means of the transportation lines already mentioned and the sail to the city of twenty miles is made in a surprisingly short time on express trips. There are in summer, as is the rule on most of the islands, two mails each way every day, thus giving summer visitors the same privilege in this respect as is enjoyed in most of the free delivery cities.

The stores here are fully equal to those existing in many large cities to-day, and are completely stocked with every line usually found in a first-class general store.

Orr's Island was first brought to the notice of the outside public through Mrs. Stowe's book, "The Pearl of Orr's Island," and still counts among its patrons some of the earlier visitors of years ago.

GREAT ISLAND

In consequence of the large size of this Island and close connection with Brunswick by the well-known Gurnet Bridge, it seems but natural to suppose it to be a portion of the mainland. Its steep, wild shores, sung of in prose and poetry, are an endless succession of sharp points, cosy coves and sandy shores, from which slope up the green fields and tilled land of the farmers, these fields in turn having for a back ground the dark forests.

Since the establishment of steamboat connection with Portland, parts of this island have been much sought by seekers for recreation on the Maine shores, and although not so well known as some of the other islands, the fact is apparent to the visitor that here is a place that is bound to grow in popularity, the demand for select building locations being even now quite active. The free rural delivery of mail having done away with the necessity of the local offices, there is now only the office at Cundy's Harbor, where is located the centre of population and summer business. It is only a question of a few years when this will be one of the most frequented places in the bay, its charms of scenery alone being sufficient to bring it to the most favored notice of the traveling public. The summer visitor of Casco Bay will do well to consider Cundy's Harbor and Great Island as one of the spots where he can most profitably spend his vacation. Another very attractive and picturesque spot is Gun Point, which can be reached by boat landing from steamers of the MacDonald Line at Card's Cove, and also by carriage from Orr's Island.

To Business Men:

THE Casco Bay Directory, as its name indicates, is a directory of the island trade district and all points in the bay connected with Portland by regular steamboat service. As such it is the only reliable Directory of this section. The publishers wish to warn business men against fraudulent publications. Copies of voting lists, or names obtained from unreliable sources, having no circulation beyond the advertisers' copies. The Casco Bay directory is a personally canvassed list of all the residents of its district and is backed up by a substantial subscription list. The names of summer visitors for this work are obtained only after considerable expense and can be relied upon as a representative list of summer travel.

We wish to thank patrons and all others who have in any way assisted in the publication of this issue of the Directory.

Very respectfully yours,

LONG ISLAND.

LONG ISLAND, formerly a part of the town of Cumberland, now attached to Portland, is one of the most important islands in the bay, both in point of size and popularity. The sail to this island, about five miles from the city, is a most popular one, and is enjoyed by thousands in the summer time, both to enjoy the far-famed clam bake and shore dinners, served here perhaps better than anywhere else in New England; and to pass a few weeks in a spot of delightful coolness and comfort in the most enjoyable company.

In some of the pavilions connected with the leading hotels, dances are held twice a week through the entire summer, while for a LONG ISLAND, PORTLAND HARBOR, - MAINE.

THE Granite Spring Hotel, because of its healthful surroundings and convenient location, takes its place at once among the leading hotels of the Maine coast.

The pure Granite Spring Water used in this hotel exclusively, is not to be compared with any other private water supply on the shores of New England. Pure water and good health go hand in hand and the Granite Spring is acknowledged by experts to be unequalled in this respect.

Thoroughly furnished, and equipped to handle the rush of summer travel without the slightest inconvenience and with every comfort for its guests.

Transportation to Portland and the islands by two steamboat lines, making ten or more trips a day.

For circulars and rates apply to day's amusement, a visitor can make choice of all the active sports which make a vacation at Casco Bay one round of enjoyment. In this connection it may be said, however, that on Long Island is the finest surf-bathing beach in this vicinity. The long rollers and comb-ers from the ocean here break and foam on as fine and hard sand as could be desired. The beach being in the form of a crescent and very evenly graded, surf bathing can be enjoyed at any time of tide. On the north and west shores are clam beaches, where a plentiful supply of these bivalves can be had for the digging.

One of the principal attractions to those who wish for shaded walks and drives, are the fine groves, thick with the balsam-laden pines, which are a feature of this portion of the Maine coast. The roads are excellent; there are several well stocked stores carrying a general supply of everything needful; a post-office, two mails each day in summer, and quick communication with Portland by two steamboat lines.

A word about the hotels to those who have never visited Long Island will be opportune. They are modern, well equipped, and most carefully managed, and everything looking to the comfort and enjoyment of guests is provided in full measure.

THIS ISLAND is second in size of the Casco Bay group and presents a most varied and pleasing aspect to the eye, its wooded vistas of green pine boughs, through which pass the quiet roads and by paths, offering an appreciative relief from the bold coast scenery.

SOUTH SHORE, GREAT CHEBEAGUE.

"Chebeague Island is beautiful for situation," these were the words of a resident of another resort in beautiful Casco Bay. The source of this opinion gives it value. It is also the opinion of the rapidly increasing number of summer visitors, as it is growing in popularity as a summer resort each year. It is only ten miles from Portland, good boat accommodations, the very best of roads for driving or bicycling, being constructed of shells, these, together with its charming views, make it a delightful place of rest and recreation.

The inhabitants are of good old stock and are endeavoring to keep the tone of the island high, and the high class of visitors who

CLIFF ISLAND.

Cliff Island is perhaps the least known of any of the more important islands of Casco Bay, and hence has even a better opportunity for growth than many of the larger islands whose attractions to the summer set are more widely known. There are reasons why Cliff, or Crotch Island, as it was formerly called, presents to the better class of summer travel a strong claim for patronage. The first and most important point is that it is one of the outside islands, out in the blue deep, where the waters of old ocean are clear as crystal, and the restless changing sea is ever wearing away the serrated rocks which are the foundation of the island. In bold contrast to the scene of surf and granite on its coast, is the magnificent pine and fir growth which now covers about four fifths of the surface.

The island is a part of the city of Portland, although it has no city airs withal. There are several boats a day to and from Portland and to the lower islands. The class of cottages here are modern built and of handsome designs, being occupied by some of our best non-residents, and as the steamer lands at the pier in summer, the scene is one of life and enjoyment.

There are several boarding houses and all enjoy an excellent patronage. The Island is not one of the largest in point of size but fully makes up in its natural beauties for any lack in this respect. From its southern side can be seen the picturesque Jewell's Island, only a half mile distant, and beyond: the open sea.

In point of churches and schools, Cliff Island has both; also an excellent grocery and general store, post-office with two mails a day in summer, etc., etc.

Cousin's Island—Littlejohn's Island.

(Town of Yarmouth.)

THE SCENERY here is very attractive and a more pleasant spot for a summer vacation could not be found. The surface is well wooded with pine and hard wood growth. The drinking water supplies are excellent. Littlejohn's Island on the east is connected by a bridge and is a fine drive. There are many points of interest and the Islands are a lively place in summer. A short row or sail of one-half mile on smooth water takes one to the mainland. Steamer accommodations to and from Portland are frequent and the sail is a most pleasing one. The patronage of these Islands in summer may be said to exceed any other island in the bay, according to their size.

BAPTIST CHURCH.—Regular services in summer at 2 p. m. School District No. 1, Yarmouth, thirty weeks, divided in three terms. Both the School building and Church are handsome, modern structures.
